“A black-and-white animal scurried by!” said Pen Hen. “I think it might be a goose.”

“I saw it, too,” said Big Pig. “Perhaps it’s a cat.”

“Something is rustling in the bush,”
said Nat the Cat.
“Let me take a look.”

“That’s no cat!” said Nat.
“Could it be a rabbit?”

“Oh, my,” said Pen Hen.
“You don’t think it could be . . .
a SKUNK!”

“It walks like a skunk,” said Tug.
“It has black-and-white stripes
like a skunk.”

“It has a fat, bushy tail like a skunk,” said Big Pig. “Here it comes. Look out!”

“Hello. I’m Scram the Skunk,” the black-and-white animal said. “I’d love to play with you.”

“Is your name really Scram?”
asked Pen Hen.
“That is a strange name.”

“Yes. Everyone says SCRAM when they see me,” said the skunk.
“I just want to be friends.”
