Meet Barack Obama!

: Wecancan

In His Own Words

“No matter who you are, no matter what you look like, no matter where you come from, here in America, you can make it if you try.”

It was cold on January 20, 2009. Barack Hussein Obama stood in front of the waiting crowd.

He raised his hand and swore to protect the country. The crowd cheered for America’s first African-American president.

A Hawaiian Beginning

公众号：Wecancan

Barack Obama was born in 1961 in Hawaii, U.S.A. His mother was from Kansas, U.S.A. His father was from Kenya, Africa. They met as college students at the University of Hawaii.

That's a Fact!

His favorite children's book is Where the Wild Things Are.

Obama never really knew his father. When he was just two years old, his father moved away. When Obama was six, his mother remarried and had another child. The family moved across the Pacific Ocean to Indonesia. Obama spent lots of time with his stepfather. He taught Obama to box.

Childhood

公众号：Wecancan

After four years, his mother wanted a better education for her children. She sent Obama back to Hawaii to stay with his grandparents. There, he attended the Punahou School.

Obama played on the basketball team and did well in his classes.

The Punahou School in Hawaii

Hawaii had many multiracial (MULL-tee RAY-shul) families, but few African Americans. Obama was one of only three black students at his school. He started to notice racism there.

MULTIRACIAL: Having parents of more than one race
RACISM: The belief that certain races are superior to others

Obama felt different from other students and wished his father was there to teach him about his African family.

When Obama was ten, his father came to visit him from Kenya.

Obama was excited to spend a whole month with his dad.

Obama's father lived in Nairobi, Kenya.

Obama's father visited Punahou School. He spoke to the class about Kenya. Obama was sad when he left. It was the last time he ever saw his father.

That's a Fact!

Obama was called "Barry" before he went to college.

Then he began using his full name, Barack.

Obama's Cool "Firsts"

Road to the Presidency

In 2004, Barack Obama was asked to give the main speech at the Democratic National Convention. This was an important event. He wrote the speech himself and became famous for it. His speech gave people hope for the future.

In His Own Words

“There is not a Black America and White America and Latino America and Asian America—there’s the United States of America.”

People wanted the government to change. Obama thought he could do that. So he decided to run for president. His campaign (kam-PANE) slogans were “Yes We Can” and “Change We Can Believe In.”

How could Obama win? He was just 47 years old, very young to be president. His campaign did not have a lot of money, and there had never been a black president before.

Obama didn't let this stop him. He used the Internet to organize volunteers and to raise money.

On Election Day in November, 2008, Barack Obama won!

He became the first African-American president. The White House was Obama's new home.
